Contents

1 Internal Transfer Policy 2

1.1 Purpose 2

1.2 Scope 2

1.3 Responsibility 2

1.4 Policy 2

1 Internal Transfer Policy

1.1 Purpose

The purpose of this policy is to provide Nagwa's employees with the opportunity to apply for any open positions to enhance their skills, help them develop new competencies, and pursue different responsibilities internally.

This policy specifies the rules, conditions, and procedures for the transfer of an employee from one position to another to fulfill the company's business interests or to respond to the employee's transfer request. This will raise employee motivation, productivity, and retention levels.

1.2 Scope

This policy applies to all Nagwa employees who have completed six months in their current position. The six-month waiting condition may be revisited in some cases, for instance, if the transfer will take place within the same department (intra-departmental transfer).

1.3 Responsibility

The recruitment section shall be responsible for executing employee transfer procedures along with the direct supervisor, HR manager, and the involved unit heads.

1.4 Policy

Upon the announcement of a vacancy, an eligible and qualified employee has the right to submit a request to be internally transferred by completing an "Internal Transfer Request". The request should be signed by the employee's current direct supervisor and unit head to ensure they are both notified of this request.

A recruitment officer shall then verify the employee's eligibility for the transfer by reviewing the main requirements of the vacant position and the compatibility of the applicant's knowledge, skills, and abilities to that position.

Transfer Eligibility Criteria: An employee can apply for an internal transfer opportunity to any vacant position provided they meet the following eligibility requirements:

1. 6 months in their current position
2. compatibility of experience, skills, and education/qualifications to the open position
3. acceptable level of performance in current job (this condition can be revisited in case the employee is not a good fit for their current position and the transfer is initiated by management as a second chance).

If the employee does not meet the requirements, the recruitment officer notifies them by email that their request has been declined.

Following the eligibility check, an employee may be required to retake the English test in case one year has passed since their last test or if their previous test score does not match the new position's required one. If the employee is requesting a transfer to a position that requires a different technical background or experience, they may need to set technical tests. An employee who successfully completes the testing phase shall then proceed to a technical interview (if required).

It is the responsibility of the recruitment officer to inform the employee with the results by email within a maximum of 15 days from the date of the internal transfer request.

In case of acceptance, an employee shall submit an adequate notice of transfer that must not exceed one month to avoid any probable risk of disrupting the workflow in their team. In case of rejection, an employee has the right to apply again for the same position after 3 months.

The recruitment officer should send an email to the HR manger, direct supervisor, new direct supervisor, and unit heads with the effective date of transfer. The HR manager should review and approve the salary change due to the employee transfer. In any case where the employee salary will be subject to a decrease due to the transfer, the transferring employee should agree to this by signing an addendum to the employment agreement.

The direct supervisors (former and new) must agree on the required notice period that must not be more than one month. Factors such as the urgency to fill the position, status of the employee's present workload, and difficulty in filling the employee's present position are to be considered in determining a transfer date.

The former direct supervisor and the transferring employee will complete the employee's Performance Apraisal Form within 2 weeks of the transfer date. The new direct supervisor will receive a copy of the Performance Appraisal Form and consider that input in determining the employee's salary increase during the next scheduled salary review.

The recruitment officer must send an email to hr.team@nagwa.com to inform the HR team of the approved transfer to apply the changes needed on either the HR System or the employee documents/files.

Transferred employees should receive the salary of the new position in case the transfer has effectively taken place by the starting date of the pay cycle. If not, proration should take place and the transferred employee shall take their salary proportionately to the time spent in each position.

An internal transfer due to low performance may be initiated as a last chance for low performers by their managers or the HR department. An employee who is proven to not fit in their current position may be recommended for another position that fits their qualifications. Similarly, in this case, the employee should successfully complete the required technical/behavioral assessments before moving forward with this transfer.

On some occasions, an employee may be transferred to another position in response to a business need in order to maintain an efficient and productive workflow and ensure the best results.

In addition, based on the needs of the team as determined by the team leader and unit manager, the unit has the authority to transfer employees to positions within the unit.